European Society of Criminology: Working Groups

The Society has established eight working groups:

- Thematic working group on juvenile justice (Chair: Josine Junger-Tas)
- Quantitative criminology (Chair: Andromachi Tseloni)
- ESC European University Curriculum Working Group (Chair: Gorazd Meško)
- European Governance of Public Safety Research Network - EUGPSRN (Co-Chairs: Gordon Hughes and Adam Edwards)
The first meeting of this working group took place at the Conference of the European Society of Criminology in Helsinki in August, 2003. The reports produced by the members of this group led to the publication in 2006 of an International Handbook of Juvenile Justice edited by Josine Junger-Tas and Scott H. Decker (published by Springer). The group invites national juvenile justice experts to present papers on the situation in their own countries, answering if possible the following four essential questions:

1. What are the main policies in your country in terms of the prevention of crime, the treatment of young offenders, and the respect of children's and young people's procedural and individual rights?
2. Have there been in the last 15–20 years any specific trends in these policies?
3. What is known about the practical outcomes of the present policies, both concerning the effective reduction of delinquency and the respect of children's rights?
4. Does your country have policies as well as evidence based programmes to make prevention and interventions more effective and individual rights better respected?

Juvenile justice experts willing to make a contribution to the working group, please contact Jungertas@xs4all.nl.

Quantitative criminology
(Chair: Andromachi Tseloni)
atseloni@uom.gr

ESC members with research interests in quantitative criminology are invited to join the newly formed European Quantitative Criminology (EQC) working group. Apart from defining a pool of European criminologists with quantitative orientation and promoting communication among them, the EQC working group’s shape and objectives are open for discussion. Possible functions include organizing quantitative criminology or research methods panel sessions at ESC conferences or holding one-day EQC workshops, establishing cross-national quantitative criminology research ties to aid in competing for European Commission funds, offering a student award for the best quantitative paper submitted to the ESC meetings, and drafting guidelines for quantitative research methods courses, etc.
If you would like to join, please send your name, position, affiliation, and (optional) quantitative research specialization/expertise to: atseloni@uom.gr. Your views and suggestions for short and longer-term functions of the EQC group are greatly welcome. Please include the group’s abbreviation, ‘EQC’, in the subject field of your e-mail message.

ESC European University Curriculum Working Group
(Chair: Gorazd Meško)
gorazd.mesko@fpvv.uni-mb.si

The purpose of the working group is to foster high quality European university programmes in criminology as well as innovative teaching in this area. The working group has organized a number of sessions for the ESC conference in Amsterdam and workshops are planned for the future conferences. It is also working on conducting a census of European higher education programs in criminology.

Due to a greater transferability of knowledge, mobility and exchange of academicians in the field of criminology plans of the working group for the period 2006-2009 are learning about programmes in criminology, criminal justice, crime prevention and community safety, victimology, etc.; obtaining research grants for creation of a European Higher Education Directory consisting under and post-graduate programmes in the mentioned areas, institutions and professors (teachers) of criminology.

Everyone who is willing to participate in developing the quality of teaching and contributing to the development of standards of criminological programmes in Europe is very welcome. Do not hesitate to contact gorazd.mesko@fpvv.uni-mb.si

European Governance of Public Safety Research Network - EUGPSRN
(Co-Chairs: Gordon Hughes and Adam Edwards)
hughesgh@cardiff.ac.uk - edwardsa2@cardiff.ac.uk

Origins and Progress to date
This Network was established at the second conference of the European Society of Criminology (ESC) in Toledo following a special panel of researchers examining crime control and safety strategies in European localities. It was at this panel that the group of researchers discussed the origins of the network and the conceptual arguments behind its broad focus on the ‘governance’ (rather than simply government) of ‘public safety’ (as opposed to the relatively narrow concern with crime control) specifically in ‘Europe’ (as opposed to generically). The Network organised an inaugural meeting and colloquium at the Open University in February 2002 on cultures of safety in Europe, sponsored by the journal Social and Legal Studies. This inaugural meeting established the broad aim and objectives of the Network and the initial organisation of the Network. Since then the Network has organised special panels at the Helsinki, Amsterdam, Cracow and Tubingen conferences. Members of the Network have also produced a special edition of the Community Safety Journal (vol 3, no.1, 2004) on the politics of prevention and safety in Europe, and also a further special edition of the sage journal Theoretical Criminology (vol 9, no. 3, 2005 see: http://tcr.sagepub.com) on public safety and comparative criminology in Europe, based on the members of the Network’s research.
For more information on the work of the group, see the ESC newsletter July 2006 (available on the ESC website under Newsletter) or contact the co-chairs directly (hughesgh@cardiff.ac.uk - edwardsa2@cardiff.ac.uk)
Aim of the Network

'To facilitate comparative research into current developments in the governance of public safety occurring in European localities'.

The aim of the Network expresses the belief in the distinctiveness of European criminology but also recognises the provisional character of this belief and the need for systematic comparative research to corroborate or revise this proposition.

Objectives

A number of specific objectives have been established in support of this aim:

- To examine the models of social explanation employed within policies for public safety
- To question the transferability of these policies across different social contexts
- To explore the (un)intended consequences of these policies
- To consider the ethics and democratic accountability of these policies
- To evaluate alternative criteria for evaluating these policies.

Publications

- The Governance of Safety in Europe: Special Issue of the Journal Theoretical Criminology, 2005, 9(3).

Membership of the Network

The constitution of the Network remains quite informal. The Network be potentially open to all members of the ESC who share a research interest in its aim and objectives.

Current members of the ESC who belong to this working group include the following colleagues (with emails attached. Members please let the Network know if incorrect):

European Postgraduate and Early Stage Researchers Working Group
(Chair: Jenny Johnstone)
j.johnstone@law.gla.ac.uk

Origins and Progress to Date
The initial meeting of the European Postgraduate Researchers Group took place at the European Society of Criminology (ESC) Conference in Tubingen. The ESC, the Centre for Criminological Research, University of Sheffield, and the Scottish Centre for Crime and Justice Research, University of Glasgow support the Working Group. The Working Group is primarily aimed at doctoral and post-doctoral researchers in the early stages of their career (up to 7 years research experience). The Group provides the opportunity for members to present their research, and provides information on publishing work, pursuing academic/research careers, applying for research funding and working collaboratively. It is an interdisciplinary group, with members from various departments from across Europe who are involved in criminological research, for example law and sociological studies. The Group is currently in the process of developing a web page detailing the work that members are currently engaged in, and providing a forum for dissemination of information useful to members and potential new members.

Aim
The aim of the Working Group is to provide a forum to discuss, develop and collaborate on new and innovative criminal justice research with other early stage researchers and lead/senior academics on a European level.

Objectives
- Promote the dissemination of information on the research projects undertaken and the methodologies employed by doctoral and post-doctoral researchers across Europe who are in the early stages of their careers.
- Establish a communication network between members (e-mail distribution list, dedicated webpage, a regular newsletter)
- Organize sessions at the annual ESC meetings which provide for:
  1) the opportunity for early stage and postgraduate researchers to present their work.
  2) benefiting from the experience of Senior Academics through sessions on 'Getting Published' or 'Putting Together Research Proposals'.
- To consider further methods of providing tips, advice, support and dissemination of current projects for example through the web-site.
- Gathering support and promoting pan-European collaborations.

Membership
The Group is currently coordinated by:
- Jenny Johnstone, Scottish Centre for Crime and Justice Research, University of Glasgow, j.johnstone@law.gla.ac.uk
- Jaime Waters, Centre for Criminological Research, University of Sheffield, j.waters@sheffield.ac.uk
- Matthew Hall, Centre for Criminological Research, University of Sheffield, m.p.hall@sheffield.ac.uk
- Coralie Fiori-Khayat, Faculté Libre de Droit et ECO, coralie.fiori-khayat@orange.fr or direction@formation-droit-cfk.fr
- Melanie Jane Wellsmith, University College London, Jill Dando Institute, m.wellsmit@ucl.ac.uk
Members
Members are doctoral and post-doctoral researchers in the early stages of their career (up to 7 years research experience).

Associate Members
Associate members will be Senior Academics who have experience of leading research projects and who would like to offer their support to the Group. Professor Joanna Shapland and Professor Michele Burman are currently Associate Members of the Group.

Joining the group
All ESC-members who would like to be part of this group, either as Members or Associate Members are invited to join. Please contact either Lisa Burns at the The Centre for Criminological Research, University of Sheffield, Crookesmoor Building, Conduit Road, Sheffield, S10 1FL UK. E-mail: l.k.burns@sheffield.ac.uk Phone: +44 (0)114 222 6859 or Jenny Johnstone at j.johnstone@law.gla.ac.uk

European Development and Life-course Criminology (EDLC)
(Chair: Arjan Blokland & Paul Nieuwbeerta)

Origins
The development of antisocial behaviour within individuals’ lives is the focal point of Developmental and Life-course Criminology (DLC), an exciting and growing research area in criminology. Much of the knowledge base on the longitudinal patterning of delinquency and crime over the life span has emerged from using data from the United States, Great Britain and more recently Australia. Yet, developmental patterns result from the complex interplay between individual and contextual factors, including societal and legal institutions. Since these institutions differ cross-nationally, developmental patterns may do so accordingly. DLC-research from other European countries is thus inexplicable to gain detailed knowledge on criminal careers and test developmental criminological theories. Fortunately, longitudinal projects on the development of antisocial behaviour are underway in various European countries and the number of European researchers on DLC-topics is substantial and growing. In order to stimulate DLC-research in Europe and to promote contact between the various European research groups working on DLC-issues, we have established the European Developmental and Life-course Criminology working group. ESC members involved in longitudinal studies on the development of delinquency and crime are kindly invited to combine their expertise and join the working group.

Aim
To facilitate research on developmental and life course criminology and maximize international dissemination of DLC-research results.

Objectives
A number of specific objectives in support of this aim have been established:
• promote communication between European DLC-researchers
• organize thematic DLC-sessions at the annual ESC meetings
• establish cross-national research ties and promote international collaboration on DLC-topics
• offer a ‘best European paper’ award for outstanding research in the DLC-field

Membership
The working group is chaired by and its activities coordinated by Arjan Blokland and Paul Nieuwbeerta. All ESC-members involved in longitudinal research projects are invited to join. If you would like to join, please send your name, position, affiliation, and a description of the research project you are working on to: edlc.esc@nscr.nl

European Homicide Research (EHR)
(Chair: Paul Nieuwbeerta)

Origins
Homicide is one of the most dramatic and tragic offences. It has very high priority in research, public opinion, policy, and prevention in the European nations. Unfortunately, it is one of the most difficult crimes to be studied due to the low frequency and the high variability of events. Moreover, most statistical sources on homicide that exist in European countries are hardly cross-nationally comparable. Regrettably to date our knowledge and information on homicide in Europe is rather limited.

Therefore, it is of importance to stimulate the study of homicide in each of the different European countries. Furthermore, there is a need to describe differences in homicide patterns across European countries and examine various explanations for the (cross-national) differences in these patterns. Violent crimes result from the complex interplay between individual and contextual factors, including societal and legal institutions. Since these institutions differ cross-nationally, homicide patterns may do so accordingly. Cross-national research thus is inexplicable to gain detailed knowledge on homicide and test criminological theories on violence.

In order to stimulate homicide research in Europe and to promote contact between the various European researchers working on national homicide studies, we have established the European Homicide Research working group. Fortunately, homicide research projects are underway in various European countries and the number of European homicide researchers is substantial and growing. ESC members involved in these homicide studies are kindly invited to combine their expertise and join the working group.

Aim
To facilitate research on homicide in Europe and maximize international dissemination of homicide research results.
Objectives
A number of specific objectives in support of this aim have been established:
• promote communication between European homicide researchers
• organize thematic homicide sessions at the annual ESC meetings
• establish cross-national research ties and promote international collaboration on homicide research
• offer a ‘best European paper’ award for outstanding research in the area of homicide research

Membership
The working group is chaired by and its activities coordinated by Paul Nieuwbeerta. All ESC members involved in homicide research projects are invited to join. If you would like to join, please send your name, position, affiliation, and a description of the research project you are working on to: ehr.esc@nscr.nl.

Additional Programme

Gala Dinner

Participants and accompanying persons are kindly invited to join the optional Gala Dinner. This event is scheduled for Thursday, September 27, from 9:00 PM to 12:00 PM, in the magnificent Palazzo Grassi, situated very close to the University area.

Together with few other noble dwellings the palace is one of the few surviving examples of Medieval urban configuration in Bologna. The arcade is supported by wood beams in the typical ‘crutch’ shape, while the main gateway presents a pointed arch lintel, and the one-light windows show terracotta decorations. In the 15th-century inner courtyard intaglio works by the woman sculptor Properzia de Rossi and a Madonna with Child, a 16th century terracotta, are worth mentioning. In the patrician chapel, Giuseppe Mazza made stucco decorations, while ornamentation is by Ercole Graziani (1704). Today, the palace, restored between 1910 and 1913, is the seat of the Military Officers’ Club.

Bologna is renowned for its culinary tradition and some regard it as the food capital of Italy. It has given its name to Bolognese sauce and other famous dishes. Registered Participants will be offered courses of traditional local specialties. There will be a selection of cold and hot dishes, some of them also particularly prepared for vegetarians. In addition, a selection of non-alcoholic and alcoholic beverages will be served during the whole evening.

The all-inclusive price is 60 € per person.

A musical entertainment will be offered, after the dinner, by the Chorus Athena of the Civic Archaeological Museum of Bologna.

8TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE
OF THE
EUROPEAN SOCIETY
OF CRIMINOLOGY
3 - 5 September 2008, Edinburgh, UK
CALL FOR PAPERS

This event will build upon and extend the now established tradition of the European Society of Criminology in stimulating and focusing co-operation and exchange among scholars throughout - and beyond - Europe.

We look forward to a varied and inclusive discussion, embracing with enthusiasm the catholic scope of topics, methods and approaches that make up contemporary criminological debate. In particular, Edinburgh - as the capital of a nation within a nation - is an apt place in which to consider further questions about national, supra-national and sub-national governance and institutions and their relation to the major criminological questions of our time.

Papers are welcomed on a range of topics. Full details are available on the conference website. The deadline for abstracts is Friday 30 May 2008.

For full information please visit the conference website
