Criminology as unitas multiplex

What is a unitas multiplex? What is the usefulness of the concept? What is the sense of its use in Criminology?

1. Unitas Multiplex is a paradoxical concept. It articulates opposite notions: the unity and the diversity; the homogeneous and the heterogeneous. Its author is Angyal, who, in 1941, created it in order to capture the complexity of the concept of “system”. Forty years later, E. Morin re-designed this notion through the concept of complex organized unit.

2. What is the usefulness of the concept? It is useful to deconstruct the idea of substantial unit, of inseparability, of indivisibility. It also illustrates the complex relationship between the parts and the whole; between the object and its components.

3. Its use in sciences. The naming of different scientific domains, such as Biology, Economics, Sociology, and so on, creates an illusion: that these disciplines are endowed of unity that is equivalent to an individuality. Scientific disciplines are seen as living organisms or persons. The naïf History of disciplines almost always describes their origins, including its “fathers”, “emancipation”, “maturity”, “latest developments”, and even its “conquests”... This apparent organic individuality, stemming from anthropomorphism, is easily deconstructed by rigorous method-driven historical and philosophical analyses, such as those developed by M. Foucault.

4. Its use in Criminology
   4.1 The naïf histories of Criminology identify it as a living individuality. This kind of individuality does not exist. Criminology does not have a genetic identity nor “founding fathers”; it did not conquer anything and it still did not die. The prophecies of some critic criminology ideologists, from the 60s and 70s, concerning to the coming death of Criminology, have not been fulfilled. Criminology exists. And that is all.

   4.2 What we can do, in a method-driven manner, is to analyze its conditions of possibility, its conditions of emergence, and its current conditions of existence. We could and we should analyze it as a system of dispersion (M. Foucault) or as a unitas multiplex. Criminology is paradoxical knowledge. It is a complex system of thinking, composed by a huge range of theories, concepts, statements, objects, and practices that are many times opposite and contradictory. It still presents, however, the typical unity that characterizes complex systems. This unity is completely different from an individuality.

4.3 Where does this systemic unity come from? It does not come from its ontological identity. It comes from its formal, epistemological and methodological organization.

4.4 Allegory. For a better understanding I will use a demographic and a geographic allegory. i) Criminology is a vast territory with defined, yet open, borders. It is a territory connected with other territories of knowledge and science by a communication network. ii) In this territory there is a vast population composed by small, medium, and large groups: this is the criminological scientific communities. The community has an important property of the complex systems: self-organization. Through its self-organizing nature, the community defines the rules of its methods; it judges the value of theories and concepts and it operates “scientific revolutions” (Th. S. Kuhn). iii) Through diversity and dispersion, the community converges to a common social problem: crime and justice. It is the time for pragmatics and action: to enlighten the phenomenon through scientific rationality; to put solid scientific evidence at the service of the definition of criminal and security polices; to evaluate the efficacy and efficiency of policies and practices.

In summary, Territory, Population and Action: these are the three systems of dispersion from which Criminology may and should get its organizational unity.

Residents and visitors from criminological territories, welcome to Criminology as unitas multiplex!

II. THE SCHOOL OF CRIMINOLOGY OF THE FACULTY OF LAW, UNIVERSITY PORTO

After a preparation period of ten years, the School of Criminology of the University of Porto was created in 1996. Following the European tradition, the School was created as an autonomous department at the heart of the Faculty of Law. The first activities included the preparation of Doctoral and Master degree programs in Criminology, besides other minor postgraduate courses. Following another decade, the Bachelor’s degree in Criminology was created.

Currently, the School of Criminology integrates several international research networks on crime, justice and security. It divides its activities into three branches: Research, Education, and Community Services. The first branch is developed through the Crime, Justice and Security Interdisciplinary Research Center. The center directs the Local Observatory on Security and the National Observatory on Juvenile Delinquency. It also develops research on Law and Behavior (mainly on the decriminalization of drug use), Epistemology and History of Criminology, and experimental studies at the Laboratory and the simulated prison. This is a truly multidisciplinary and transdisciplinary group, congregating researchers from diverse domains, such as penal law, sociology, economics, philosophy, psychology, or biology.

Regarding the second branch – Education – the School, besides the traditional degrees in Criminology (Bachelor, Master, and PhD), offers curricular internships that allow students to put the skills developed inside classroom into practice. This internship has strongly contributed to the recent formal approval of the profession of Criminologist by the Portuguese Parliament.

Finally, the School of Criminology answers the needs of the community through a research-action framework. The output of this branch produces strong social benefits, with outcomes such as the evaluation of domestic violence programs, sentencing studies, restorative justice and mediation, and monitoring of the Portuguese experience on decriminalization of drug use.

The School of Criminology embodies the concept of complexity, both in terms of its objects and its pragmatics. Its matrix aims at overcoming the notion that naturalism and moralism represent opposite methodologies, and its team works towards a true problem-solving Criminology.

THE CITY OF PORTO

Overlooking the Douro River, Porto is one of the most ancient European cities. It was born and developed from the northern bank of this river during the Middle Ages. One of the most significant aspects of Porto and its historical centre is its landscape, combining harmony with the urban structure and presenting a frame of rare beauty. The city was classified as World Heritage by UNESCO in 1996.

When discovering Porto, you will find many surprises. Besides its welcoming environment, Porto is also contemporary and artistic. This is shown not only in the streets, architecture, monuments and museums but also in the terraces, restaurants, leisure and shopping areas.

Some places you can’t miss in Porto: The Clérigos Tower and Church, Palácio da Bolsa, Church of S. Francisco, Foundation of Serralves, Sé of Porto, Lello & Irmão Library, Casa da Música, Te Port Wine Museum, Wine Cellars, the D. Luís I Bridge, Douro River, Aliados Square, Street of Santa Catarina, Café Majestic, São Bento Train Station, Casa do Infante, Bolhão Market.

   d. In order to avoid problems, we make some recommendations:
      i. PowerPoint version: Please use the versions PP 97-2003 and 95 (*.ppt) or 2007, 2010.
      ii. File format: Do not save your ppt presentation using the pps format. Instead, prefer the ppt format.
      iii. Fonts: Only fonts that are included in the basic installation of MS-Windows will be available (English version of Windows). Use of other fonts not included in Windows can cause wrong layout / style of your presentation. Suggested fonts: Arial, Times New Roman, Tahoma. Size: higher than 15.
      iv. JPG images are the preferred file format for inserted images. GIF, TIF or BMP formats will be accepted as well. Images inserted into PowerPoint are embedded into the presentations. Images that are created at a dpi setting higher than 200 dpi are not necessary and will only increase the file size of your presentation.

v. All videos and animations in the presentation must run automatically. We cannot provide support for embedded videos in your presentation; please test your presentation with the on-site PC several hours before your presentation. Generally, the WMV format should work with no difficulties, but we cannot assure sound in every room.

e. When your session is over, your presentation will be deleted from all computers, no copies or backups will be made.

3. Standard equipment
Video projector; screen; desktop computer; monitor; remote control with laser pointer. Wi-Fi/Internet connection is available.
