14th ESC ANNUAL CONFERENCE „Criminology of Europe: Inspiration by Diversity“ at Prague, 2014

Dear participants and guests,

From the beginning of our endeavour to attract this prestigious conference to Prague we felt an obligation to do our best for covering all needs and expectations of visitors not only in the respect of Prague monuments or famous Czech beer, but also toward an intellectual excitement and a support for research in criminology. That's why we would like to remind both the idea and the aim of the conference. Despite the continuing European integration, a typical feature of European countries remains diversity – be it in cultural tradition, social policy, ethnic composition, or in criminal law and justice and crime policy. This diversity represents a great challenge for European criminologists, but it can also be utilized as a vital source of inspiration. Europe could be taken as unique laboratory for testing relationships between different policies, crime and changing societal conditions. Nevertheless we can also rise up the challenging question: is it yet a chance to speak about an (pan-)European criminology, are there any common features valid for crime rates, causes and/or policies in Europe as the whole? It would be nice to discuss these issues confronting both continental and overseas perspectives.

The conference offers the open space for such an exchange of ideas and of research outcomes in all areas of the criminological research. Comparative research studies should play an essential role in this effort because they create an ideal platform for:

- looking for a general “European” perspective on problems of integrating Europe which can also lead to both the formulation and the co-ordination of crime policy or crime prevention,
- sharing of theoretical and methodological knowledge among European countries,
- the improvement of quality standards in criminological research.

We highly appreciate the worldwide understanding for our intention as demonstrated: we have received more than 1 000 abstracts not only from Europe, but also from America, Australia, Asia and Africa. The thematic range seems to be broad enough involving traditional criminological topics and some new themes or streams as well. Nevertheless, the task to organize all panels as fully consistent was too difficult, so we ask all presenters for a bit of tolerance. The chance to speak with interesting people should not be limited on the one hour panel session only. The manageable diversity can offer a creative potential, indeed.

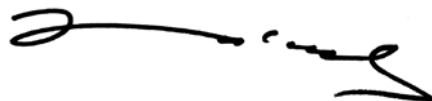

Among number of panels and posters some key topics will be exposed at plenary sessions:

- Current debates in criminological theory
- Problems of transition in Central and Eastern Europe
- Drug policies across Europe
- Immigration as a new challenge

ESC Annual Award session will be opened by Presidential Address of Prof. Michael Tonry. We would like to thank him and the ESC Board (and namely Marcelo Aebi) for the support, because the organization of such a huge conference represents a rigorous test for a small community of Czech criminologist. We would like to express our thanks for auspices from key institutions and its representatives as well.

It is a honor to host prominent scholars here, at Charles University, which is placed just in the heart of Prague and of Europe. You'll be cordially welcomed.

Jiri Burianek,
Head of the Organizational Committee

WELCOME

“Inspiration by Diversity: the European Society of Criminology in Prague”

Criminologists world-wide, and members of other social science species, will watch with envy and awe as the European Society of Criminology convenes in the resplendent city of Prague. Participants in this, the fourteenth annual meeting, are multiply fortunate.

The ESC moves from strength to strength and the annual meetings with it. This year's in Prague, a UNESCO World Cultural Heritage city and home of Charles University, one of the world's oldest and finest, looks likely to be the largest and most exciting yet. Sessions are being held in a cluster of university buildings in the historical town center along the river Vltava. All are within 5-minutes' walk of the old Jewish Quarter and the Old Town Square. Participants can easily alternate intellectual engagement with aesthetic, architectural, and historical appreciation of one of Europe's most beautiful cities.

The conference theme—“Criminology of Europe: Inspiration by Diversity”—is especially apt. Prague has for centuries been at the crossroads of Europe, never primarily Eastern or Western or Northern or Southern, distinctly itself and yet reaching into each region. Contemporary Europe is like that, harmonizing in some ways while in other ways countries struggle to perpetuate and enrich their distinctiveness.

Criminology also is a crossroads, a place where sociologists, psychologists, lawyers, and people trained in many other disciplines come together. They try to understand and explain the making, the breaking, and the enforcement of laws in their own country while looking across national boundaries to learn what happens there, partly in order to understand their own countries better.

Participants benefit from that cultural and intellectual diversity. Sometimes the organizers are empirical social scientists, sometimes lawyers, sometimes social theorists, and it generally shows, to everyone's benefit. National and regional history and culture also show. Meetings in the Nordic countries are palpably different from meetings in Mediterranean countries. Likewise meetings in the east from meetings in the west.

The flavor of ESC meetings is seldom plain vanilla or the color neutral beige. Every British Society of Criminology meeting feels indistinguishable from any other. Every American Society of Criminology meeting may as well be held in a Marriott at Chicago's O'Hare Airport. Every ESC meeting has its own flavor and tastes like no other. The four conference plenaries in Prague—on etiology, immigration, drugs, and distinctly Eastern and Central European developments—are diverse in their topics and in their composition. All 8 speakers are European nationals, from 7 countries. They teach in 8 different countries.

The conference was organized by the infant Czech Society of Criminology (né 2012) and Charles University. It is supported by the university's Faculty of Law and its Faculty of Arts and by the Institute of Criminology and Social Prevention in the Czech Ministry of Justice.

Charles University's Professor Jiří Buriánek, the conference chair, and co-chair Miroslav Scheinost, head of the Czech Society of Criminology, look forward to welcoming participants and invite them to join in the conference dinner at Avion 58 on Friday evening. The setting in an ancient brewery along the river is redolent of Czech history and culture. The cuisine includes traditional Bohemian specialties such as goulash, Czech dumplings, roasted duck, white and red cabbage, and many delicious foodstuffs. Typical Czech beers, prepared according to age-old recipes and famous world-wide, will be conspicuous in their presence.

Let the rumpus begin!

THE CZECH SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY

The Czech Society of Criminology: Young, but Agile

ČESKÁ
SPOLEČNOST

THE CZECH SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY

During the past two decades Czech criminology has carried out a lot of relevant research projects particularly at universities and at the Institute of Criminology and Social Prevention. On the contrary, with the exception of the Police Academy, criminology is not taught as a core course in any BA or MA program in the Czech Republic. Typically, it is included in introductory courses to forensic disciplines at faculties of law and moreover several faculties teach criminology as part of their sociology, social work, social policy and security studies curricula. The offer and/or the demand are still growing and criminology needs a more intensive share of knowledge.

Therefore, as in the past, criminologists are recruited from the ranks of legal science, sociology, psychology or other disciplines. Criminology continues to evolve as a typical interdisciplinary field. This makes the existence of a specialised professional association even more important.

This objective need and the increased interest in criminology at academic institutions and among students represented the decisive incentive for the establishment of the Czech Society of Criminology in 2012. The basic aim of the society is to support the development of criminology as a self-standing scientific domain and the effort to intensify the collaboration among professionals who are interested in criminology.

The interest to join was quite surprising. While in 2012 there were 48 constituent members, today's number of members is over 160, a large number for such a small scientific community. Members are recruited from among academics and university students in the fields of law, sociology, psychology, social work, pedagogy and others. The second largest category of members is comprised of research staff, not only from the Institute of Criminology and Social Prevention, but also from other research institutes of the Academy of Sciences.

About one-tenth of members are crime control practitioners from the police, courts, public prosecutor's offices and correctional facilities, while other members come from NGOs and local governments. There are also representatives from a number of institutions, such as the Czech Statistical Office and private businesses, and other sectors, such as the mental health field, counselling psychology, attorneys-at-law, the Czech School Inspectorate, the Ministry of Interior and more. Overall, experts from over 50 different institutions came together at the Czech Society of Criminology in 2013. The society promotes expertise through seminars and conferences and prepares the publication of a specialised journal.

The organisation of the 14th Annual Conference of the ESC in Prague in collaboration with the Faculties of Law and Arts at Charles University has been so far the greatest challenge for our young society. Our aspiration is to prove the ability of Czech criminology as a faithful partner of the European scientific community and of course to promote criminology as a well-respected science that can offer substantial knowledge to understand the processes and problems of the contemporary world. Your active participation at the conference will greatly help us in this effort.

Welcome to Prague!

Respectfully yours,

Miroslav Scheinost

Chair of the Czech Society of Criminology

CHARLES UNIVERSITY IN PRAGUE

The University in Prague was founded by a charter issued on 7 April 1348 by Charles IV, King of Bohemia and Emperor of the Romans, as the first Studium generale north of the Alps and east of Paris. It was modelled on the universities in Bologna and Paris and it had four faculties: theology, liberal arts, law and medicine. Charles's son and successor Wenceslas (Václav) IV extended his influence over the University; in 1409 he issued the Kutná Hora Decree, by which he strengthened the status of Czech academic community members.

Soon afterwards, the University underwent a transformation under the impact of the Hussite reformist movement which preceded the European Reformation. A very strong influence was exerted over the University by its Rector at this time, the religious reformer Master Jan Hus. A remarkable period in the history of the University came with the rule of Rudolf II, who turned his capital Prague into a cultural metropolis where university learning flourished side by side with the court (and its scholars Johannes Kepler and Tycho Brahe).

The Thirty Years' War of 1618–1648 led to fundamental changes of the University. In 1654, the victorious Roman Emperor and King of Bohemia Ferdinand III attached the Caroline Studium generale to the Jesuit University (dating back to 1556), located in the Clementinum compound, and renamed the institution as the Charles-Ferdinand University (a name which persisted until 1918).

Modern university life began to thrive after 1989, drawing strongly on international cooperation. Aware of its mission, Charles University continues to nurture academic cooperation and plays an active role in a broad spectrum of European and global programs. The key priority of Charles University is to continue to enhance its prestigious status as a research university. Charles University has over 53,000 students - roughly a sixth of all students in the Czech Republic – enrolled in more than 300 accredited degree programs that offer over 642 different courses. There are currently 17 faculties at the University (14 in Prague, 2 in Hradec Králové and 1 in Plzeň). The University has more than 7,900 employees; of this number, almost 4,500 are academic and research staff.

It is the largest and most renowned Czech university.

ABOUT PRAGUE

Prague – the capital of the Czech Republic situated on both banks of the Vltava River is a beautiful city with a rich history. Thanks to its location in the centre of Europe, Prague has always been an important crossroads of trade and culture. In the course of its thousand-year history, Prague has always been the political, cultural, and business centre of the country. Often called “Golden” or “Hundred-spired”, Prague belongs to the architecturally unique European towns, attractive for tourists from around the world. Visitors find themselves enjoying a living museum of European architecture from Romanesque time to the present. Prague has 1,200,000 inhabitants and stretches over approximately 500 square kilometers. The dominant feature of the city is Prague Castle, which houses the gothic St. Vitus’s Cathedral. The castle had been the seat of Czech kings since 1087, when it became the seat of presidents of Czechoslovakia on 1918, and since 1993 it has been the seat of the president of the Czech Republic.
